Prepare for an unforgettable summer of discovery at our new WRA Innovation and Maker Boarding and Day Camp, a premier residential experience designed for curious minds entering grades 3 through 9. This immersive program bridges the gap between classroom theory and real-world application, offering an intensive exploration of science, mathematics and cutting-edge engineering. Students will spend their days as "makers," gaining full access to WRA's world-class Wang Innovation Center (WIC). Here, they will master a sophisticated suite of professional tools, including 3D printing, laser cutting, CNC milling, UV printing, artificial intelligence, electronics and much more. Whether they are experimenting with garment sublimation or prototyping complex robotic components, campers will be guided by expert instructors to transform their boldest ideas into tangible realities.

Beyond the lab, the curriculum extends into the heart of the industry with exclusive field trips to local innovation hubs and scientific businesses, providing a firsthand look at how the skills they are learning shape the future. As a residential camp, the experience continues long after the school day ends; students living on campus will enjoy the independence of dormitory life and a vibrant schedule of evening social activities designed to build lasting friendships and a collaborative community. The program culminates in a comprehensive final project in which each student integrates their newfound technical skills and creative vision into a signature invention.
